

In 2012 I was a newer dealer that was setting up for a lot of future growth. I was being approached by a lot of F&I companies. Everybody had a story on why their company was the best. I didn't want just another product provider. I had known Dan Jackovich for many years when he approached me about Automotive Development Group. Their story was different. It wasn't about products. It was about driving results and building wealth outside of the dealership. I knew a little about Reinsurance but I didn't know if we were big enough to qualify. Dan and his team guided me through the process and now I'm receiving regular statements on my new wealth building mechanism. They have shown me additional ways to create premium and I'm confident I can accumulate substantial assets for me and my family. In a short time ADG became my true partner and I highly recommend them if you don't want just another product provider.
